Description: In "Anthology," the first comprehensive survey of Jefferson Pinder's film and video work, he investigates race and identity through a series of short pieces that explore cultural co-optation and inversions of traditional roles. These pieces often take the form of self-portraits: solo performances in which the central character is played by the artist. Pinder's work, shown in installation and screening formats, mirrors crucial discussions that continue to shape our society. The artist will be in residence in early April in conjunction with a Multimedia & Performance symposium at Inova/Kenilworth (April 4). He will present a workshop entitled Performing Identity while in residence.
