This unique program, sponsored by the College of Nursing, will give participants a first-hand look at the way communities are dealing with health and wellness concerns in this southern African nation. Students will visit hospitals, clinics, social service organizations and the University of Malawi to learn how practitioners, community activists and others are working for better health care for Malawians. Most of the visits will be in and around Blantyre, the commercial capital of the country. Trips will include visiting a family that hosts orphans, an extended trip into the rural areas around Lake Malawi and an overnight stay in a wildlife preserve. You will be part of an extended Malawian family on this trip and will have a chance to experience the beauty of southern Africa! Don't miss this once-in-a-lifetime opportunity! Priority will be given to nursing students but all those interested in community and public health are encouraged to apply.
