Course description and objectives

This geography course investigates diverse Muslim geographies and Islam, the second largest of the world’s religions and the fastest growing in the United States and in Europe, as a complex and ever-changing religious system. It begins by looking at the origin and main features of the religion, introducing the students to Prophet Mohammad and the religious scripture of Qur’an, as well as the historical context in which Islam developed. The course explores the diversity of Muslim cultures in different geographical, social, and political contexts and the various understandings of the religion that emerge in these. We will read about Muslim lives in places such as Indonesia, Saudi Arabia, Egypt, Europe, and North America, the Arab Spring, and Islamic institutions and movements such as the global network Al Jazeera, liberal Islam, Sufism, Islamic feminism, and Islamic fundamentalism. Students will look at how Islam is lived, focusing on everyday practices and prevailing ideologies. This implies the study of socio-cultural factors within various Muslim contexts and how they reflect certain collective actions as well as societal developments. Rather than approaching Islam as a static social phenomenon, emphasis is given to social and cultural change, diversity, and conflict.

In addition, the course familiarizes the students to the discourse of “Orientalism” and how their own perceptions of Islam and Muslims might be colored by it. We will look at how the media in the West has portrayed Islam and events in the “Muslim world.” In the end of the course, the students will learn about Muslims in the U.S. This will expose the students to the misrepresentation of the thesis “clash of civilizations” and the “us vs. them” rhetoric. Islam is a personal faith of millions of Americans, and Muslim Americans express and implement this faith in various ways within an American context, resulting in what some scholars have called “American Islam.”

Course grading and requirements

Attendance and participation 15%
Since class participation is a required component of your grade, it goes without saying that attendance is very important. I will take attendance each time we meet, and your attendance will count toward you participation grade. More than three absences will result in lowered final grade. That is, if you miss more than three classes, your attendance grade will be downgraded by one point/missed class (for example from A to A-, from A- to B+, from B+ to B etc.). Each student should bring at least one question or problem-based discussion point related to the readings to each class.
Two quizzes 10%
A couple of unannounced quizzes, or response papers, will be given out during the semester, which will cover readings due that day and/or the lecture from previous week. There will be NO make-up quizzes.

Two in-class film reviews 10%
You will write two analytical reviews of two documentaries shown in class. In your reviews you should relate your discussion to appropriate class discussions and readings. There will be NO make-up film reviews.

Midterm Exam 35%
The midterm exam is on October 8 and will cover readings and lecture notes and discussions from first day of classes to October 1.

Final exam 30%
The final exam is on December 10, (same time and place, Bolton B40) and will cover readings and lecture notes and discussions from the entire semester.

   (Editorially Revised, 8/26/11)
The university has asked departments to break down for students how much time they will spend working on various aspects of their classes.

As the UW System assumes “that study leading to one semester credit represents an investment of time by the average student of not fewer than 48 hours” (UWS ACPS 4), a 3-credit course such as this one will require a minimum of 144 (3 x 48) hours of your time. You may find it necessary to spend additional time on a course; the numbers below only indicate that the course will not require any less of your time.

If this is a traditional, or face-to-face course, you will spend a minimum of
- 37.5 hours in the classroom
- 75 hours preparing for class, which may include reading, note taking, completing minor exercises and assignments, and discussing course topics with classmates and the instructor in structured settings
- 31.5 hours preparing for and writing major papers and/or exams.

If this is an online course, you will spend a minimum of
- 37.5 hours reviewing instructional materials prepared by your instructor and placed online
- 75 hours preparing for class, which may include reading, note taking, completing minor exercises and assignments, and discussing course topics with classmates and the instructor in structured settings
- 31.5 hours preparing for and writing major papers and/or exams.

If this is a hybrid course, you will spend a minimum of
- 18.75 hours in the classroom
- 18.75 hours reviewing instructional materials prepared by your instructor and placed online
- 75 hours preparing for class, which may include reading, note taking, completing minor exercises and assignments, and discussing course topics with classmates and the instructor in structured settings
- 31.5 hours preparing for and writing major papers and/or exams.

Notes
- The breakdown above is for a standard 15-week semester. In a 16-week semester, the numbers breakdown above changes as follows. Traditional: 40 hours in classroom, 80 for preparation, 24 for papers and exams; online: 40 hours of online instruction, 80 for preparation, 24 for papers and exams; hybrid: 20 hours in classroom, 20 for online instruction, 80 hours for preparation, 24 for papers and exams. Again, these are minimums.
