Taught by Anja Blecking (Chemistry) and Vicki Bott (English), this unique class will bring together 22 students from UWM and 22 seniors from Milwaukee high schools to study and create spaces where science and storytelling meet. We’ll examine the stories science tells by reading various genres and modes (film, podcast, popular magazines, book, infographics, and original lab reports) about science. Expect a variety of activities: guest lectures from scientists and storytellers, visits to labs, engaging group discussions, and lots of one-on-one attention to develop your reading and writing.
