This course is an introduction to genre studies focusing on horror on the small screen. Horror is currently thriving on television. There are horror shows on major networks, cable channels, and streaming services and The Walking Dead is one of the most popular shows on television. However the history of the genre on television goes back many decades. The course will examine the evolution of the genre over time, starting with The Twilight Zone in the late 1950s and continuing through contemporary shows like The Walking Dead and American Horror Story. It will include different narrative modes and series from each major era of television.
