Annual Report of ROTC Committee 1959-60

The Committee met several times during the academic year. The Committee attempted to define its functions in relation to the current status of ROTC in the University of Wisconsin. Since an ad hoc committee has been established to specifically study and recommend action on the question of a compulsory vs. voluntary ROTC program, this committee decided to limit its function to questions of exemptions and other current local matters.

One request for exemption was considered and acted on.

The Committee was also asked to interpret the meaning of "minimum load" as applied to the engineering curriculum. The Committee agreed that 14 credits was the minimum semester load for engineering students and that any engineering student carrying less than this load would not be required to participate in the ROTC program. This was brought to the attention of the Secretary of the Faculty for clarification in future bulletins, catalogs and other publications.
