
The Human Rights Committee accepted as one of its major concerns the issue of discrimination in off-campus housing.

As a result of the efforts of the 1966-67 Committee on Human Rights and the establishment of a firm and clearly stated university policy on off-campus housing by the Housing Office, no cases of discrimination were called to the attention of the Committee. The Committee, through its chairman, maintained communication with the Housing Office with reference to this issue.

The Human Rights Committee did not hold regular meetings, but was available for examination and investigation of all cases where the constitutional rights of any citizen in the university community may have been violated.

The Human Rights Committee has no recommendations to make to the faculty at this time.
