13 a. In a sane humane democratic and constitutional society there can be no use of maiming force against peaceful and non-violent student protesters, or against policemen seeking to uphold law and order. To avoid the serious danger of the escalation of force, protests must be peaceful, non-violent, and non-disruptive. If they are not, and if the disruptive protesters persist in their violation of the rights of other students, and the orderly conduct of the University, they themselves must shoulder a portion of the blame when ultimate sanctions to protect basic freedoms and the University's legitimate activities are employed.

13 b. To implement the foregoing principles (in paragraphs 1-12 and 13a), we suggest that the Chancellor, pursuant to University policies established by the University of Wisconsin Board of Regents, and exercising his executive discretion be guided by the following recommendations which clarify our understanding of "graduated response" to interference with bona fide University activities:

1. That the Dean of Student Affairs, or his duly appointed representative, clearly notify those who violate University rules or state law of such violation, and of the consequences of such violation;

2. That the Dean of Student Affairs, or his duly appointed representative, give those accidentally or innocently at the scene of disruptive action, time to remove themselves before the University invokes sanctions against violators of University rules or state law;

3. That when the circumstances warrant it, the Chancellor, in consultation with the Dean of Student Affairs, consider the wisdom of seeking a judicially obtained and legally binding restraining order prohibiting disruptive activity;

4. That the Chancellor, in consultation with the Dean of Student Affairs, employ the University's own security forces and, as a last resort, the Milwaukee police, only after the persuasive efforts of the Dean of Student Affairs have been exhausted.
