
In its meetings of the academic year the Library Committee formulated no recommendations requiring faculty action. A presentation of factual material concerning circulation, library use, and budget was put off after the budget situation effectively froze present acquisition policy about mid-year and the probable budget for the next biennium made the hiring of area specialists a visionary project.

In its discussions of budget and the reduced funds available for acquisitions the committee rejected the idea of a system of departmental allocations as undesirable. The committee heard reports on circulation, acquisitions, and services, and studied the use of library facilities on the 24-hour schedule. The use of materials from special collections was discussed, as was the establishment of a collection of recordings. The committee reviewed the present reserve book policy and concluded that it best provides maximum use of material.
