The Human Rights Committee has been relatively inactive during the past two years. During 1969-70, the committee has had a number of meetings with university administrators and faculty to discuss possible roles and activities that the committee could undertake. Two points came out of these meetings. The Human Rights committee should remain a faculty committee reporting to the faculty. Making it a sub-committee of another committee or organization such as SLIC was discussed and rejected. Second, it is important that the committee not lose sight of the problems resulting from the infringement of students' and others' rights within a large-scale bureaucratic system.

In March and April, a proposal for changing the mission, structure, and methods of selecting members of the committee was discussed by the Codification committee, the Human Rights committee and members of the university administration. One continuing difficulty has involved the appointment of the student members; this year, the students were not appointed until late in March, 1970. A proposal will be submitted to the UWM Senate in the future.

Two matters involving race were referred to the committee. The committee is still considering these at this time. Meetings have been scheduled for this purpose.
