UWM ‘redefining and sharpening skills’ for local professionals

When reflecting on her experience with the School of Continuing Education (SCE), budding baby boomer Anne Lemmon credits the Career Coaching program with providing her the “…valuable insights, job search tools and contacts that helped redefine and sharpen my resume and interview skills.”

The Career Coaching program is part of the Career Transition Center (CTC), an SCE organization striving to provide Milwaukee’s workforce professional clarity during a time of economic uncertainty.

Since May of 2008, the CTC (as part of the SCE Center for Workforce Development) has been offering classes, seminars, workshops and guidance for adults re-entering the workforce, changing careers or striving to advance their current work situations. CTC participants learn how to prepare for interviews, identify and capitalize on their unique talents while on the job, and overcome market challenges to achieve goals that may have once seemed out of reach.

“I would recommend this program to anyone thinking about changing careers, employers or even those unsure of their security in their current position,” says Lemmon.

Both individuals and employers can benefit from CTC services, located at the SCE which is housed in the Plankinton Building on Wisconsin Ave. in downtown Milwaukee.

For more information, to register for classes or to schedule a complimentary career coaching intake session, visit sce-ctc.uwm.edu or call Yolanda White at 414-227-3243.